New launch system means 1,000 jobs

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
At least one thousand new permanent jobs are expected to result from agreement between the Air Force and NASA giving National Space Technology Laboratories a lead role in development of a new space launch vehicle for civilian and military needs.
Senator John C. Stennis Friday reported the agreement allows for assembly and testing of all completed engines in the Air Force's planned Advanced Launch System (ALS) to be conducted at the Hancock County facility.
The ALS program is a "new generation" of liquid fuel engines, according to Mack Herring, NASA Public Affairs Officer at NSTL.
"At the present time a space shuttle can carry into orbit payloads weighing approximately 50,000 to 60,000 pounds," he added.
"In developing this new technology in rocket engines, the ALS will culminate in a launch vehicle with the capability of placing up to 150,000 pound payloads into earth orbits," Herring continued.
Some modification of existing facilities and construction of additional facilities for the test procedures will be required for the program.
Herring said in the early phase construction of a component test facility, which will cost in the neighborhood of $40 million, will begin next year.

Design work on this phase of the $300 million program will begin in the very near future, he added.
"Later requirements in the program will come in the early 1990's with full up testing planned for the 1993-94 time frame," Herring said.
"There is no question that this is a major program NASA is gratified to hear from Senator Stennis on the agreement reached on the use of NSTL by the U.S. Air Force and NASA for engine testing and development for the Advanced Launch System program," he added.
"We consider heavy lift launch capability is a very important one in United States civil and military space program," Herring said.
"We're particularly pleased that NASA is responsible for any propulsion related technology activities and for the development of any new liquid rocket engines and we look forward to working with the Air Force on this critical program," he continued.
The Mississippi Senator said the work agreement will create 400-500 construction jobs at NSTL beginning next year, and will gradually build up to an additional 1,000 permanent jobs over the next five to 10 years.

As part of the agreement, the Air Force will establish a Liaison Office at NSTL to insure a full understanding of the unique NSTL capabilities.
Funding, which will total some $300 million over the next six or seven years will be provided by the Air Force.
"This is a great breakthrough in the range of work being performed at NSTL," Stennis said.
"It is a testimony to the outstanding capabilities and record of achievement NSTL has earned in the past," Stennis said.
NSTL is the NASA field installation which provides technical support and test facilities for the development of large liquid rocket propulsion systems and conducts research and development in the field of space applications.
"NSTL is in an excellent position to perform the crucial testing on these engines for the military as well as for NASA," Stennis said.
"It makes good sense to use these facilities to the maximum and also to prevent the costly duplication of rocket test facilities at military sites elsewhere when they already exist in Mississippi at NSTL," Stennis said.

Waveland fires termed accidental

By DENA BISNETTE
Two fires in Waveland Thursday were both found to be accidental.
Waveland Fire Chief David Garcia said Hancock County Fire Marshal Jay Marsh, who assisted in the investigation of the two blazes, said one fire started in a heating unit and the other one started as a car fire.

At 110 Bienville Drive, the residence of Dr. William D. Fitzgerald, the fire began in a central gas furnace in the attic of the house.
Fitzgerald was home at the time of the 3 p.m. fire but was working in the backyard and was not hurt.
Garcia said the flames consumed a large portion of the attic of the wooden home and smoke and heat damaged the upstairs.
Most of the downstairs damage resulted from water the two Waveland pumper trucks and 13 firefighters used to keep the blaze from spreading to the rest of the structure, and was cleaned up before firefighters left the scene, the chief added.
"The men did a fine job of confining the fire to the upper portion of the house," he said.

Several individual firefighters from the Bay St. Louis Fire Department and Clermont Harbor Volunteer Fire Department assisted.
The second fire occurred in a tool shed and shop area in a garage building at the John Hayward residence at 920 South Beach Boulevard.
According to Garcia, a car in the garage was being repaired and a person who was welding on the underside of the vehicle accidentally ignited either the vehicle's carpeting or some insulation.
The welder was not injured, he said.
Twelve men, two pumper trucks and the department's salvage and overhaul truck responded to the fire.
Garcia said the Waveland Police Department assisted at both fire scenes.

NASA director praises NSTL

By DENA BISNETTE
NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher, who visited Hancock County's National Space Technology Laboratories Thursday to present awards to some of the facility's employees, has praised the Mississippi facility for its role in advancing the U.S. Space program.
Fletcher presented NASA's Exceptional Service Medal to two NSTL employees, J. Harry Guin of Long Beach and Kenneth R. Human of Slidell, La.
Guin, installation operations manager, received the award "in recognition of demonstrated leadership and outstanding achievements in support of propulsion test activities and long-range planning at the National Space Technology Laboratories."
He has worked with NASA both as a staff member and a private contractor. Among his contributions since he rejoined NSTL in 1974 has been modernization of the facility's technical libraries.
Human, chief counsel at NSTL, received the medal "in recognition of unique dedication and outstanding contributions in a wide spectrum of areas, including legal counsel and labor relations provided to NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories."
Human, a graduate of Franklin Pierce Law Center in New Hampshire and a member of several professional organizations including Louisiana Bar Association, has "saved the government a great deal of money" by getting all complaints involving NSTL dismissed, Fletcher said.
The Public Service Group Achievement Award went to the B-1 Project Team of Pan Am World Services, Inc.
The team received its award "in recognition of outstanding professionalism in the timely accomplishment of the B-1 construction effort in support of the Space Shuttle Main Engine Project at National Space Technology Laboratories."

The team was involved in the construction of a third test stand at NSTL from December 1986 to December 1987. The test stand has already been turned over to Rocketdyne and is being prepared for an engine firing in about two weeks, Fletcher said.
The team is headed by Robert A. Bush and includes Reginald E. Wise, Thomas J. Lang, Anthony R. Taconi, John H. Webb, Donald M. McIntyre, Eric R. Phillipott Jr., Sandra M. Piernas, Steven C. Thomas, Albert L. Chambers and Dorothy M. Melilli.
Also included are Anthony W. Sones, Robert A. Bush, Anthony D. Gelsomino, Richard Ferrill, Steven L. Nunn, Myron L. Meyers, O.L. Rhodes, Billy G. Boyte, W.F. Vaughn III, Alfred O. Fischer Jr., Basab K. Mukhopadhyay and Bettye J. Hursey.
Service Awards were presented to Jerry Hlass, NSTL director, for 35 years; H. Larry Jordan, Sidney L.

Whitley and Parker B. Higdon Jr. for 30 years, and Wendell R. Vandriff for 25 years.
Fletcher, the first man to head NASA twice, served as speaker at the awards ceremony and then went to witness his first shuttle engine test firing, which lasted 520 seconds.
Fletcher said he is pleased that NSTL will continue to play a major role in building the future of the space program, mentioning specifically the completion of the third test stand, newer programs such as the Advanced Launch System and the Advanced Solid Rocket Motor and a record number of test firings last year including the first 1,000 second firing ever.
"The NSTL team is doing a first-rate job in returning the shuttle to safe flight, and I'm confident you'll keep up the good work," he said.
He gave a brief status report regarding the president's new space policy, which is expected to give more support to NASA, and one advance in the program since the Challenger accident, which he said is no longer affecting the morale of NASA personnel except in the eyes of the media and a small but vocal

County looking at two landfill sites in addition to Catahoula expansion

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Maintenance Department is now looking at two specific sites for a new county landfill in addition to expanding the existing landfill.

According to Hancock County Maintenance Superintendent Bill Johnson, the present landfill is on a 28-acre tract of NASA buffer zone land in Catahoula.

Only seven acres are being used at present and the county is negotiating with NASA for permission to use the remainder of the site.

The 28 acres are currently being reserved to confirm boundaries.

In addition, a letter from NASA's chief counsel, Kenneth R. Human, to Johnson indicated that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will begin work on an environmental impact assessment for the additional property.

Until results of the assessment are available, the county should continue to use only the present seven acres, the letter stated.

Upon completion of the assessment, Bill Matkin, a Corps of Engineers representative, is expected to contact the Hancock County Board of Supervisors regarding a new lease agreement for the additional 21 acres.

Johnson said the Corps is planning to drill some monitoring wells to keep track of any indications of geological impact that could determine if the ground is suitable for continued use.

Any expansion of the existing landfill, however, will be only temporary, Johnson stated.

"We're hoping to get the better part of a year out of it," he said.

One of the new sites being considered is in the Standard Community on CC Road off Highway 603. The Standard site was once an illegal dumping ground but is now being used as a trash dump.

Trash, which consists of leaves, branches and other types of debris, is governed by less stringent environmental regulations than the household garbage being buried in the Catahoula landfill.

The State Bureau of Geology has already been given authorization to make test borings at Standard and one other site, a piece of 16th section property slightly south of the Standard site which is not as favored because the county would have to go to the expense of providing access roads, Johnson explained.

According to research already completed by Johnson and David Taylor of Gulf Regional Planning Commission, who is assisting him with the project, there are only narrow possibilities that a new landfill could be located much farther south than Standard.

"The big problem is that you can't bury garbage in areas with lots of water," Johnson explained.

Potentially harmful compounds in the garbage will leach out into the soil and may contaminate a water supply through run-off, or the garbage may even work itself back up through the ground to the surface, he said.

Joiner to plead guilty, accept 7-year sentence

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
Bob Joiner, Southern District highway commissioner, is expected to receive a seven-year prison term in exchange for pleading guilty to two of 11 counts in a federal indictment. He will also resign from office. This is a part of a memorandum of understanding with the U.S. attorney's office signed in February by Joiner, his lawyers and federal prosecutors. Joiner, 58, will plead guilty to a charge of extortion in the amount of $161,000 from James Williams of Southwest Paving Inc. of Brookhaven from 1980 through 1986, according to the agreement. A sentence of seven years in prison on the extortion charge will be requested by federal authorities. The second plea of guilty will be entered on a charge of tax evasion for 1984 and in exchange for Joiner's cooperation, the agreement calls for a five-year suspended sentence on this charge. Joiner pleaded innocent in December to the 11 charges listed in the indictment which included extortion, bribery and tax evasion. Also listed in the indictment were alleged kickbacks Joiner had received in the amount of $238,157 since 1980 from four contractors. He also reportedly owed $122,230 in back taxes, plus interest and penalties. According to the agreement, the other nine counts listed in the indictment will be dropped.

Joiner was reelected in November without opposition. In a Democratic primary, he defeated opponent Billy McDonald of Harrison County by a 2-to-1 margin. Joiner is the first state highway commissioner to ever be indicted on federal charges while in office. An effective date for Joiner's resignation will be announced following a hearing on the agreement later this month before a U.S. District Court.

If convicted on all 11 indictment charges, Joiner would have received a maximum prison term of 20 years and fines of $1.8 million. State law requires a special election be held to fill the unexpired position (nearly four years) of Joiner's term. The election must be called by the governor within 15 days after the position is vacated and will be held within 60 days.

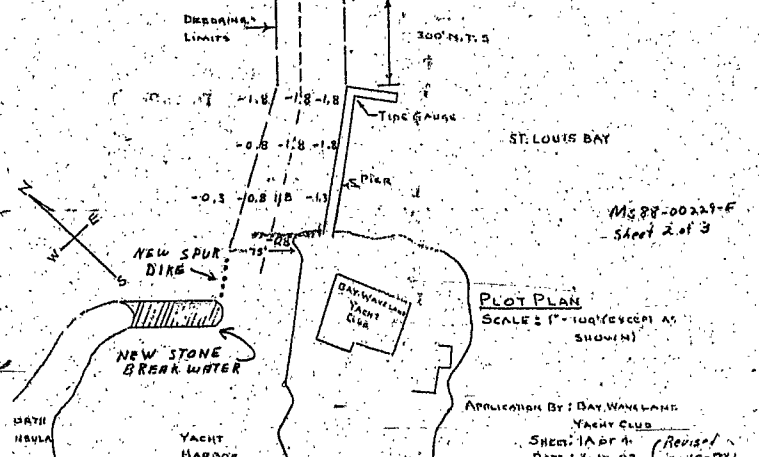

WAVELAND FIRE—Smoke pours from a hole burned Thursday afternoon in the roof of the home of Dr. William D. Fitzgerald, MD at 110 Bienville Drive, Waveland. Fire Chief David Garcia said his department was able to contain the fire to attic and roof portions of the structure, although the house sustained considerable smoke and water damage. Fire Marshal Jay Marsh said the fire is believed to have been caused by a faulty central heating unit in the attic. No injuries were reported. (Photo by Jay Marsh)

Extensive criminal court caseload set for March 22

As many as 40 criminal cases may be set for trial March 22. Circuit County Judge James E. Thomas ordered all pending criminal cases except for January indictments be set for this date after a request to dismiss a child sex-abuse case because it had been more than 270 days since the defendant's arraignment. Hancock County Circuit Clerk Pamela Metzler said Friday, the number 40 is really just a guess and the real case load will be determined Monday when Court Administrator Gayle Parker will be in the area to set up the docket. "With all the old cases and new indictments it is impossible to know at this time how many criminal cases may be scheduled for March 22," she said. Public Defender Clement S. Benvenutti told Judge Thomas the right of a speedy trial for his defendant, Perry C. Feigle, 29, of Shoreline Park had been violated. Feigle was scheduled to be tried last week on a charge of fondling a four-year-old girl. Benvenutti said Feigle's rights had been violated before Benvenutti had become a public defender in November. Thomas said he agreed about the dates, but noted Feigle had been tried in May and July last year on a charge of sexual battery against a seven-year-old. Both of those trials ended in hung juries. He also said it appeared these cases had been set together but by agreement or request the sexual battery case was tried first. Thomas said he didn't see any cause under the 270 rule, which under state law requires for defendants be tried within 270 days following their arraignment, to dismiss Feigle's case. "There's no way in actuality to get all cases tried that need to be tried within 270 days after arraignment unless I can increase the staff of the judge's office, or unless I can get other judges in here to help us out," Thomas said. In other criminal court cases this week: •Donieta G. Wakefield Baughman, 24, of 3978 Pass Road was sentenced to 12 years in prison. In June 1985 Baughman pleaded guilty to 54 counts of false pretenses or bad checks. She then received the 12-year sentence but it was suspended and she was put on probation for five years. Since then she has been in court many times and most recently was charged with shoplifting in Florida and giving a false name to authorities. Thomas told Baughman that she was lucky he could not sentence her to more than the original 12 years, which was three years on each of the first four of the 54 counts to be served consecutively and three years each on the remaining counts to be served concurrently with the first sentence. •Sherie Marie Morel, 26, of P. O. Box 208, Bay St. Louis, received a five-year suspended sentence, was fined $500 and placed on good behavior after pleading guilty to a charge of prescription forgery. •Manuel Canto, 56, of Metairie, La., pleaded guilty to a charge of fraud, but sentencing was deferred. Canto received $5,855 from the Federal Emergency Management Agency for damage to his house in Shoreline Park during Hurricane Elena. Allegedly, he told authorities that the house was his main home when it was not. The district attorney's office recommended Canto be placed on probation for three years, fined $1,000 and be ordered to pay $5,855 in restitution.

group of critics. A shuttle launch is planned for August but as Fletcher explained, "no date is sacred." In addition, the U.S. is working to build a mixed fleet capability, with a fleet of small, medium and large class expendable launch vehicles to augment the shuttle; and a manned space station with operations scheduled to begin in the mid-1990s. He called the National Space Policy released last month "a reaffirmation of NASA's central role in planning, developing and implementing civil space activities." The policy establishes the objectives of the civil space program in leadership in manned space flight and in critical aspects of space science and applications and technology. "Now, for the first time, the policy sets a new national goal of expanding the human presence and activities beyond Earth orbit into the solar system. This is a goal of enormous significance with potentially historic implications," Fletcher said. He called the next decade "a challenge" and praised NSTL's role in the program.

Quotables by CUEVAS

We have had several comments from residents on the number of political signs remaining from candidates no longer in a race.

Of course there are still three primary nominations to be filled on March 29, but the field of candidates has been greatly reduced.

We realize many of the signs are posted by friends of candidates, and those whose candidate has been nominated or eliminated should see that the posters are now removed. It is a long time until the November General Election for those who were victorious.

One person was telling me he saw a poster for a candidate still up out in the county for an election five years ago.

If there isn't, maybe there should be a law making a candidate responsible for having all posters removed within a week after an election has been settled.

The warm sunny days have been very nice in between the dreary rainy ones in recent weeks.

This is the time of the year when many folks become involved in cleaning and fixing up their properties, both residential and commercial.

It is amazing what just a little effort can produce in many instances.

Many of us get the 'itch' to be outside and begin cleaning our properties, while there are others who never get an 'itch' to do any type of cleanup.

Our communities could use a very good face lifting in many areas and it is hoped everyone will do their part as the weather warms.

An agency working in Hancock County that does not always receive the praises it should is the American Red Cross.

Some folks think the Red Cross is around only during the time of a crisis and this is really incorrect.

These figures will give you an idea of the activities of the Hancock County Chapter of the American Red Cross. During a seven-month period there were 53 families helped; 123 families interviewed; 138 family telephone calls; and assistance offered at several Hancock County Blood Drawings.

As you can see, the American Red Cross is active in our county on a regular basis.

Social Security Scam

Our Social Security system is on a safe, solid ground. And as long as I'm in Washington, it's going to remain that way. But there are some profiteers who would like you to believe otherwise. Don't believe them.

It saddens me to report that year after year, many concerned and well-meaning Americans are tricked into sending money to organizations that claim to protect the Social Security system. Some of these groups also offer to help obtain benefits and services.

What should be understood is that most of these services operate mainly to enrich their organizers. They in no way strengthen our Social Security system. And they cannot help you with benefits and services that are not already available to you free of charge.

Some of these mailings will look official. They are supposed to. The better it looks, the better the odds that you will respond to their offer. Unfortunately, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish these appeals from official government documents. What a shame.

These appeals for money are technically legal, but are they ethical? I don't think so. Scaring people, especially our older Americans, into contributing their hard-earned dollars to a dubious scam isn't right.

So the next time some group asks you to contribute to save Social Security or to pay to guarantee your benefits and services, don't send money. Instead, forward the information to your local Better Business Bureau or your local Social Security office. Both will be glad to help you.

I have never voted against Social Security. That's because I believe that what our older Americans have worked so hard to earn should not be taken from them.

By hook or by crook! P.S. For a free booklet explaining the Social Security system and its benefits, write to: Social Security, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

VANDALISM has left its ugly marks on a new parking bay in Clermont Harbor. The bay is the first new paved parking area provided on Beach Road by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors. The vandals, apparently not impressed that new public parking is finally being provided for seawall users, ran their vehicles through the pavement while it was still damp as well as writing on it. Beat One Supervisor Robert Peterson said only the appearance of the bay was damaged and that it is still usable. (Staff photo by Dena Blissette)

Governor's Weekly Report

BY GOV. RAY MABUS

Last week in this column, I wrote that one important way we can make 1988 the "Year of Making Government Work Better" was for the Mississippi Legislature to make the "unit system" of government mandatory in all counties.

I said this more centralized form of county government would lead to better service, cost savings and more accountability. This week I want to tell you how I think we can make similar improvements at the state government level.

In short, I believe we must streamline state government to make it work better and cost less.

Believe it or not, there isn't agreement on just how many state agencies, boards and commissions exist in Mississippi. I estimate 135 based on my experience as state auditor during the last four years. But others have put the number at more than 170.

By almost anybody's standards, however, there are way too many. While we trail the nation in per capita spending on education, we lead much of the nation in state government employees per capita.

In fact, we have more state employees for every man, woman and child in Mississippi than the states of New York and Massachusetts.

That's why I support a measure in the legislature that I believe will give you, the people who pay the bills, all the government you want but no more government than you need.

Under the bill, a study commission would be created to recommend how we can reorganize state government into no more than 15 agencies. The commission's recommendations would have to be ready by Oct. 1.

It is my intention to push for a state government reorganization bill based on the commission's suggestions.

Not only would service be improved significantly, but a substantial savings in tax dollars could result.

Just as importantly, there would be true accountability in the executive branch of state government, which delivers services to the people.

Currently, there is no direct control over most of the largest agencies in state government. Many of those agencies are controlled by boards and commissions which meet infrequently and cannot handle the day to day operations of the agency. This means that no one can be held accountable for how well the agency performs its job.

That would change dramatically if the executive branch were reorganized into no more than 15 agencies with agency heads either by elected officials or directly responsible to an elected official. Then, if the executive branch failed to deliver to the public, the responsibility would rest squarely with me and a handful of other elected officials, not some nebulous, uncontrollable bureaucracy. Democracy is hurt when government is not held accountable to the people it serves.

It is important to note that the bill now in the legislature would not tamper with any state agencies currently run by statewide elected officials. You can hold those officials accountable every four years at the ballot box.

Any money saved by streamlining state government could be used for other, vital services such as education, and health and welfare programs.

Already, the Mississippi Senate has overwhelmingly passed the bill to study state government reorganization. It is now in the House, which I hope will also approve it.

I sense that the people of Mississippi want what I have called "basic change" in order to get our state on pace with the rest of the nation. I believe part of that change means getting our top-heavy and often unaccountable state government into shape through reorganization.

News from the Capitol City

By Ellen Ann Fentress JACKSON—The Mississippi Legislature gave Gov. Ray Mabius some answers on his 1988 legislative requests last week, and the response was not always "yes."

The week also brought the halfway mark in the 120-day session, with more major issues of the session receiving attention than in any week so far since the Legislature convened in early January.

Action took place on reforming county government, raising teacher pay, as well as boosting salaries of state employees.

The Senate was the scene of both major floor votes of the week: passage of a bill to raise state employee salaries an average of 3.4 percent and a mandatory county-unit bill, which some county-unit supporters criticize as too weak.

The Senate passed the county-unit bill on a 40-2 vote. The legislation mandates county unit government be in force in the state's 82 counties by Oct. 1, 1989. The bill requires central construction of new roads and bridges after that date and central purchasing.

However, critics complain that the measure allows supervisors to retain responsibility for maintenance of roads in their district and to be the road foreman of their district. The term "maintenance" is undefined. They argue that maintenance, not construction of new roads, is the main business of a county's road operations.

Mabus made mandatory county unit government a key part of his 1987 campaign for governor and has made it one of his top legislative priorities.

County unit supporters look to the House to enact a stronger version of the bill, whose final wording is expected to be hammered out eventually in joint House-Senate negotiations.

In the House, committee work continued on Mabus' plan to raise Mississippi teacher salaries to the Southeastern average. The Education Committee trimmed back Mabus' call for $3,700 pay raises for teachers for the next school year. Instead, the committee proposed saving about $37 million by delaying the raise until November during the first year.

Teachers would receive the full $3,700 raise the following year.

The Education Committee restored Mabus' basic plan after a subcommittee of the education panel

The President's Column

A drug free America and freedom in Central America

By RONALD REAGAN

Recently, Nancy and I attended a very special meeting in Washington. It was a gathering of concerned citizens from every walk of life who are working with us to develop a national strategy to fight drug abuse in America; this is part of the White House Conference for a Drug Free America, which was established last year by Executive Order 12595.

A decade ago, drug abuse was ignored and, in some circles, was even glamorized. It was fashionable. Comedians joked about drugs, trivializing the problem. Yet, there was legitimate reason for concern. Fathers and mothers saw their children wasting their lives. Husbands and wives felt helpless as a loved one destroyed a marriage. And, as is so often the case, the children suffered most.

I cannot help but be proud that my wife, Nancy, took on the challenge of mobilizing our people against this evil. She came up with the formula that will make all the difference: Just say no. It is as simple as that. It is going to require all of us, working together, however, to help those we love and care for to just say no and live right. We have already made progress. First, and foremost, that complacent attitude has been replaced with vigor and active involvement. Not only is the use of illegal drugs no longer accepted, but is, in many circles, no longer tolerated.

The old line about drug use being a victimless crime is being replaced with an understanding that the money spent on drugs, even by casual users, ends up financing murderers in South America as well as on our own streets.

At our recent meeting, the members of the White House Conference were joined by some 2,000 other activists who are dedicated to a drug free America. Whatever recommendations they ultimately make, it is clear there are no easy answers. We must continue to seek every opportunity to stop the sale and use of illegal drugs. Nancy, I know, has dedicated her life to this. Not just as First Lady, but as parent and good citizen. Our commitment will not end when we leave Washington at the end of my term. Nancy and I are dedicated to working with you in the years ahead to secure the gains we have made and to keep our country moving toward the goal of a drug free America.

This is truly a national crusade. Government will do its part. Drug interdiction and well-equipped law enforcers are necessary. Each one of us has a role to play. The strategy that is emerging will depend on the widest range of citizen involvement. And I know I can count on you because you feel as strongly about this as Nancy and I do.

We want everyone to have the opportunity for a productive, meaningful life. That also requires our country to be secure, which is why we have been so concerned about events in Central America.

Democracy has been progressing in that region, but one area where totalitarianism has a foothold could well undo all that has been accomplished. Nicaragua, with its communist regime, represses its own people and threatens its neighbors. If there is any lesson we have learned, it is that freedom and peace go hand-in-hand, so it is imperative we see democratic progress in Nicaragua.

And in the past several months, under pressure from the democratic resistance, there have been some limited reforms there.

On Feb. 3rd, to my disappointment, however, the majority in the House of Representatives voted to remove pressure for further democratic reform. The Senate, on the other hand, agreed with me that we cannot leave those fighting for freedom in Nicaragua at the mercy of the communist regime and expect the process toward democracy to move ahead.

And already we can see warning signs. In just two short weeks, the Sandinistas threatened the only free press in the country and rejected a cease-fire proposal which incorporated the essential elements laid out and agreed to last August. And in the first two months of 1988, Soviet military assistance to Nicaragua has almost doubled, compared to the same period in 1987. These are serious matters and it is not time for wishful thinking. We must face reality in Central America, or we will face the consequences. We must have a policy, everywhere in the world, based on realism and strength.

The People's Business

From Mississippi Economic Council

THE TIME FOR TORT REFORM IS NOW

If Mississippi is to ever make the changes that the people desire, tort reforms must be enacted by the 1988 Legislature.

In the most recent set of statewide elections, voters expressed a desire for change politically as well as economically. When the new governor placed emphasis on the state's economic development efforts, that emphasis was met with much enthusiasm.

However, when it comes down to one of the most important economic development issues—tort reform—enthusiasm seems to be lacking. Or is it?

Several weeks ago at a breakfast meeting, over 160 Hattiesburg business leaders discussed with the Forrest County legislative delegation the need for tort reforms. All three judiciary committees in the Legislature are chaired by Forrest County lawmakers. All tort reform bills have been referred to the judiciary committees.

Tort reform is an economic development issue. Tort reform affects all business and professional operations. All those interested in the economic advancement of the state should follow the example set by the Hattiesburg business leaders and call on their legislative representatives to support tort reform legislation.

Landowners use fire to keep forest alive

By Patil Drapala
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Mississippi landowners will soon set fires to save trees and animals. Fire is not dangerous when its use is purposeful and controlled, and landowners who adhere to these principles when deliberately setting fire to their pine stands are following proper prescribed burning procedures. Smokey the Bear would even approve.

"Prescribed burning is a different concept from wildfire," said Tim Traugott, area forester with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "Prescribed burning is a controlled fire set under controlled conditions by a professional hired by the landowner."

Landowners who choose prescribed burning as a management tool for timber and wildlife must receive a permit from the Mississippi Forestry Commission before any pine stands can be burned. The Commission assists owners in supervising the fire, and in many cases, shares the cost.

Prescribed burning is not being utilized in Mississippi—a state with 16.4 million acres of timber—as much as it should be because most people do not understand the benefits. They associate fire with danger and destruction.

Controlled burning can make timberland more productive and create a better habitat for forest animals. It can rid the forest floor of undesirable plant growth and trash, thus diverting more nutrients to crop timber.

"This is the same thing cotton farmers do when they use chemicals to rid their fields of nutrient-robbing weeds," Traugott said.

Pine needles, weeds, grass and hardwood leaves left on the forest floor are hazardous because they fuel wildfires, making control impossible.

Prescribed burning rids the forest of brush buildup, makes pine stands attractive and valuable, and destroys carriers of tree diseases.

"The bottom line for landowners is that prescribed burning will increase the rate of growth on their crop trees and this increases the rate of production," Traugott said.

Prescribed burning also provides wildlife with more nutritional food because landowners can select the plants they want grown, said Dr. Ed Jones, an Extension wildlife specialist.

"If the forest floor is clear, animals have an easier time finding food and moving in their habitat," Jones said. "New plants provide better food and the animals benefit from their availability."

Forest animals will not lose their habitat if prescribed burning is done before breeding and nesting begin in the spring. Landowners who use prescribed burning never burn more than a third of their timberland a year, so that the same tract of land is burned every three to five years.

ETV Brief

GRACE KELLEY

In the 1956 film "The Swan," Grace Kelly portrays a regal princess from a central European kingdom, a role the world later recognized as oddly prophetic.

ETV looks at how a shy girl from a privileged Philadelphia family conquered Hollywood and then the heart of a prince when "Hollywood legends" explores "Grace Kelly—An American Princess" at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Mar. 16.

Narrated by Richard Kiley, the one-hour special features interviews with Jimmy Stewart, Louis Jourdan and Sir Alec Guinness. The retrospective is interspersed with home movies and clips from her biggest hits including "High Noon," "Dial 'M' for Murder," "Rear Window," "To Catch a Thief" and "High Society."

"The Swan," which displays the cool beauty and majestic charm that made her a perfect princess for Monaco, will follow the special at 9 p.m. on Mississippi ETV.

first approved a phased-in pay raise plan that Mabus labeled as unacceptable.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved 46-2 giving state employees raises, an action that Mabus has not endorsed. The Senate plan would give state employees an average 3.4 percent pay raise, costing about $12 million.

The House Fees and Salaries Committee also favors state employee raises, endorsing four percent pay raises or a $100 monthly raise, whichever is greater for the individual employee. No floor vote on state employees has taken place yet in the House.

House
HB 65. The House first voted 70-49 on March 1 to allow counties to dig graves for constituents, a service that then-Auditor Ray Mabus ruled illegal in 1984. Compretta, no.

HB 65. Two days later, the grave-digging bill died for lack of a three-fifths passage margin. The 69-53 vote was five votes short of the three-fifths requirement for revenue bills. It became a revenue bill after the addition of an amendment that required supervisors to charge at least one dollar for the task. A "yes" vote remains a vote in favor of counties providing grave digging. Compretta, no.

HB 159. The House rejected 59-57 opening the meetings of the state Parole Board to the public. Opponents of the measure argued that the added publicity would complicate the board's work. Supporters argued that the public had an interest in the board's decisions. A "yes" vote is in favor of opening the meetings. Compretta, yes.

Senate
SB 2431. The Senate passed 40-2 a mandatory county unit bill. County unit government requires more central administration of county business than under the beat system, in which supervisors handle much of the business of their districts separately. Some unit advocates, however, complained that the bill did not go far enough. Taylor, yes; Tate, no.

SB 2947. The Senate voted 46-2 to increase state employee pay by an average 3.4 percent. The higher state employee pay, not requested by Gov. Ray Mabus in his legislative package, would cost about $12 million. Taylor, absent or not voting; Tate, yes.

MAE slates 12th annual convention

More than 1,500 members are expected to attend the 12th annual convention of the Mississippi Association of Educators (MAE) at the Jackson Holiday Inn Downtown Monday and Tuesday.

"The purpose of the convention is trifold," says Peggy Peterson, president of the 13,000-member MAE. "One, it gives an opportunity to grow in professional training and knowledge; two, it renews and strengthens our bonds with fellow colleagues across the state; and three, but far from least, it's TBC time. (Taking Care of Business)," she adds.

The convention kicks off on Monday, Mar. 14, with The Big Exhibit Show where school employees get to see the latest innovations in education. The First General Session follows at 10:00 a.m. with a keynote speech by Charles Gamble, professor of law, University of Alabama.

Highlights for Tuesday, Mar. 15, include greetings from Governor Ray Mabus and the State of the Association address by MAE President Peggy Peterson at 10 a.m.

The Representative Assembly (RA) will meet at 3 p.m. The RA is the policy-making body of the MAE.

"Even though the RA is the MAE's legislature," Peterson explains, "its activities go beyond strictly internal matters; its actions impact on the education climate for learners in Mississippi's public schools."

During the two-day event, members will also attend workshops dealing with such topics as "Innovative Approaches to Adult Literacy," "Educating the Black Child," "AIDS Education" and "Bicentennial Competition for Social Studies."

Other activities include a Human Relations Banquet and a Friendship/Legislative Reception on Monday night.

PENNY SAVED

The old adage, "A penny saved is a penny earned," means little to many who grew up in the fifties. These baby boomers spend all they earn and consider saving an act of self-deprivation.

"Socking It Away," program five of ETV's "Take Charge!" takes a pointed look at the fears people have about saving and offers valuable suggestions on how they can overcome them at 4 p.m., Sunday, Mar. 13, on Mississippi ETV.

Stretch exercise program offered to Coast residents

'Stretch' is an exercise and support program designed to meet the needs of women with breast cancer.

Participants may join Stretch classes eight weeks following surgery with the approval of their physician.

Stretch is not limited to women newly diagnosed. Anyone who has been diagnosed as having breast cancer can profit from the Stretch program with the approval of a physician.

The first session will begin on Monday, March 14 beginning at 5:30 p.m. with registration. There is no registration fee. The program is offered free through volunteer services.

The exercise sessions will be lead by Judy Burchfield, a registered physical therapist who is on staff with Gulf Coast Physical Therapy Group, P.A., and the support group will be lead by Judy Day, R.N., owner of A Personal Touch Boutique.

The program will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings in the Cardiac Rehab Room at AMI Garden Park Community Hospital.

For more information regarding Stretch, call Judy Day, R.N. at A Personal Touch, 863-4112 or Delarie Maddox at AMI Garden Park Community Hospital, 865-1372.

Kindergarten students must be five years old on or before Sept. 1, 1988. All students must have "blue slips" either from the local Health Department or a private physician, and a certified copy of their birth certificate.

Clubs, Auxiliaries

Pass Christian Garden Club

Mrs. John Newkirk, past president of Bay-Waveland Garden Club, and past president of Gulf Flower Show Judges Council, was the guest speaker at the March 3 meeting of the Pass Christian Garden Club. She spoke on the 'Proper Way to Enter a Flower Show.'

Mrs. Ann Campbell, representative of the 'Stop the Dump' movement, advised members that the March 11 meeting at 9 a.m. in Chancery Court has been changed to March 18.

Mrs. Robert Doe, president, reminded members of the upcoming Spring Pilgrimage April 4-16 and the Pass Christian Garden Club 'Annual Flower Show' on April 21.

Mrs. Thomas Shea, committee chairman on Birds, told members that Martin houses and Bluebird houses should be cleaned and set up now as these birds are now coming into the area.

Wild Flower Tip: Gather and destroy fallen camellia blossoms to help prevent camellia petal blight. Rake away old mulch and replace with fresh.

Meeting concluded with refreshments served by the hostesses Mrs. Herbert Thornton, Mrs. Peter Schmid and their co-hostesses.

Next business meeting will be on April 7, 11 a.m. in the Hancock Bank Civic Center.

Bay-Waveland Garden Club

The general meeting of the Bay-Waveland Garden Club was called to order by Mrs. Thomas Tompkins, president, on Thursday, March 10 at 2 p.m. at the Garden Center, 114 Leonhard Avenue, Bay St. Louis.

Mrs. David Los Calzo read a beautiful prayer by Robert Louis Stevenson. The members then rose to pledge allegiance to the flag.

Mrs. Peter Brotmeyer brought a lovely plant, the orange kalanchoe, and said this plant is often called the kalancho. She said this plant is very easy to grow and offered pieces to anyone interested in starting a plant. She also said that this plant comes in a variety of colors, such as pink, yellow and red.

Mrs. Kenneth McKenna chose as her subject on birds the ruby-throated hummingbird, which she said is quite common in Louisiana and Mississippi. Many people design their gardens simply to attract birds and butterflies. Mrs. Lydia Shultz is showing just such a garden in the Spring Pilgrimage to be held in Waveland and Bay St. Louis on Thursday, April 7.

Mrs. John Holmes gave further information on the Dubuison Dump, which has been very prominent in the news lately. She has made an extensive study on this subject and has enlisted the aid of the mayor and other of our statesmen. It seems that there is not much anyone can do at this time to 'Stop the Dump.' However there are several bills before the House at this time, and hopefully there may be a solution of some sort soon.

The treasurer's report was read by Mrs. Victor Cavaroc and approved by the membership.

Our registrar, Mrs. Henry Brokmeier, announced that there were 41 members present and several guests. One of our guests, Mrs. Natalie Lassere, expressed a desire to join the garden club. Welcome, Natalie.

It was no nice to see our past registrar, Mrs. William Ose. Idus has recently moved out of Waveland and has been busy for the past several months getting settled in her new home. We have all missed you, Idus, and hope you will be able to continue attending our meetings.

The Garden of the Month award for Waveland was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bunol, 206 Vacation Lane, and in Bay St. Louis to Mr. and Mrs. Eric Necaise, 146 Melody Lane.

Mrs. George Baud announced that a tree had been planted at the new post office on Hwy. 90. Plans are being made to plant several more trees in and around Waveland in keeping with the Centennial Celebration. We can all help in the beautification by just trying to keep our beaches and roadways clean.

The Commercial Beautification Plaque was placed at Evergreen Florist which is a real showplace at this time of the year.

Mrs. Thomas Murphree introduced Darlene Underwood who had 'Tips for a Happy Easter.' She called on Mrs. Toodlum Byrd who showed a lovely handmade basket and a tray of handmade Easter chocolates which were later enjoyed by the members.

Mrs. Bea Snider showed what can be done with a simple wicker basket and beautiful azaleas and greenery from her yard. Her basket served as a centerpiece for the buffet table where Mrs. David Los Calzo and her hostesses had prepared a feast of goodies. We have so many talented ladies in our group that our meetings are always informative and fun.

You haven't found the best deal on a new or used car until you stop here!
